It's Your Money

Businesses can file Form 1099 series information returns free of charge

Business taxpayers can file electronically any Form 1099 series information returns for free with the IRS Information Returns Intake System (IRIS). IRIS accepts 1099 series forms for tax year 2022 and after. IRIS is available to any business of any size. It's secure and accurate and it requires no special software. It also reduces the need for paper forms.

Starting in tax year 2023, businesses with a combination of 10 or more information returns must file them electronically.

With IRIS, business taxpayers can:

- Enter information into the portal or upload a file with a downloadable template in IRIS.
- Download completed copies of Form 1099-series information returns.
- Submit extensions.
- Make corrections to information returns filed with IRIS.
- Get alerts for input errors and missing information.
- Get a confirmation in as little as 48 hours from the time the IRS received the return.
- Reduce expenses on paper, postage, storage space and trips to the post office.

1099-K reporting threshold delayed for third party platform payments

The IRS delayed the new $600 Form 1099-K reporting threshold requirement for third party payment organizations for tax year 2023. For 2023 and prior years, payment apps and online marketplaces are required to send out Forms 1099-K only to taxpayers who receive over $20,000 and have over 200 transactions. For tax year 2024, the IRS plans for a threshold of $5,000 to phase in the new reporting requirements.

Clear the Shelters pet adoption campaign

▲▼ The Clear the Shelters event has helped place over a million pets in the past 10 years. (Heather Burns photos)

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

For those who have been considering adding a furry or feathered friend to your family dynamic, but have hesitated on taking the steps to adopt a pet, now may be the perfect time to revisit the idea of pet adoption.

Now through Sept. 10 is NBC's annual Clear the Shelters pet adoption campaign, which has helped find homes for more than one million pets.

The Clear the Shelters campaign is a partnership of the NBC network and Telemundo stations with local animal shelters to raise money and promote the adoption of pets to loving homes.

This year marks the 10th anniversary of this program, and organizers are hopeful to have another successful adoption season.

Numerous studies have shown that sharing your life with a pet can help reduce stress, anxiety, and depression, and pet owners tend to have better physical and mental health than people without pets in their lives.

Saving the life of a shelter pet in need by adoption is a life altering decision for both you and the shelter pet, but the rewards of pet adoption are filled with unconditional love and companionship.

There are also financial rewards to shelter adoptions, as they are far less expensive than purchasing pets from pet shops or breeders.

Locally, the Animal Rescue League (ARL) of Boston has several Animal Care and Adoption Centers participating in this year's Clear the Shelters event.

On Friday, Aug. 23, and Saturday, Aug. 24, ARL Adoption Centers will be hosting a Smallie Summer Soiree to promote the adoption of smaller animals such as birds, guinea pigs, and rabbits.

If you have never considered these smaller types of pets before, you can join the ARL staff on Aug. 23 from 1 to 4 p.m. for a free informational session focused on the adoption and care of smaller pets.

Adoption fees on small pets will be waived for this two day event in promotion of the Clear the Shelter campaign.

ARL also offers financial pet adoption help for those considering adopting a pet with special needs through the Jeff Fund.

The Jeff Fund promotes and supports the adoption of pets that may otherwise be overlooked because of age, medical needs or personality. This fund offsets the cost of adoption by reducing or waiving adoption fees for these special needs pets that deserve loving homes.

Adoption fees for all dogs, cats and small animals at ARL shelters include spay or neuter services, health screening and veterinary examinations, microchip identification and registration, any necessary deworming, flea, tick and mite treatment, heartworm testing and preventative medication for dogs, and starter bag of Hill's Science Diet food for dogs and cats.

The Animal Rescue League Adoption Center hours are Wednesday through Sunday, 1 to 6 p.m.

Available pets can be viewed on their website, and you are encouraged to call or email in advance if you are interested in a particular pet.

Centers are located at 10 Chandler St. in Boston, 55 Anna's Place in Dedham, and 3981 Main St. (Rt 6A) in East Brewster.

Clear the Shelters is also offering virtual pet adoptions available through WeRescue. This online service allows potential pet adopters to search for pets in their area, ask specific questions about the pets, and submit adoption applications online.

For those unable to adopt a pet at this time, you can still support the Clear the Shelters cause by making a donation to one of the participating shelters.

Donation funds are used to offset medical care costs, as well as provide food and medicine for the many needy animals that reside at these shelters.

To find out more about how you can enrich your life by adopting a pet in need, visit www.arlboston.org.

Book Stew Review

'The Cemetery of Untold Stories' by Julia Alvarez

By EILEEN MACDOUGALL

Stories of the living, told by the dead, and vice versa: so many to be savored in one glorious book!

Alma Cruz is a well-known writer from the Dominican Republic (much like Alvarez herself) who has left the US to return to her homeland with the intention of burying her never-and-partially-written stories, to give them a comfortable resting place and to allow her a peaceful retirement.

There she hires an elderly neighbor, Filomena, as a caretaker for her and for the slumland she converts into a sculpture garden and final home for her unpublished works.

Philomena's story, and that of her sister Perla, is told with great tenderness, even though Perla performs a shocking act. The two other primary characters whose stories are recounted are of Manuel, Alma's father, who pursues his wife Lucia over the objections of her wealthy family, struggles to become a doctor in the US with his qualifications from the DR, and then finds a sympathetic lover as Lucia rises in the diplomatic world; and Bienvenida, the second wife of El Jefe, the Dominican dictator Trujillo, who suffers through his love, abuse, and his ultimate rejection when she cannot produce an heir.

The entwinements between the characters and their lives, alive or not, are remarkably told and the narrative is suffused with empathy, reminding me, in scope and humanity, of The Covenant of Water by Abraham Verghese.

Updated schedule for water main project on Woburn St.

WILMINGTON — The following is an update to the Woburn Street water main project that started this week.

Please be advised, the Town of Wilmington Engineering Division was notified over the weekend by the water main contractor that the Woburn Street closure phases have slightly changed since the previous notification, in an effort to help improve installation efficiency.

Starting this week, Woburn Street will first be closed to thru traffic from Federal Street to West Street from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. This closure will extend until approximately mid-September, at which point the closure will then shift to between West Street and Concord Street.

West Street and Federal Street will remain as the detour routes to bypass the work. Please be sure to follow posted detour signage during the project and refer to the DPW website and town social media for any updates.

If you have any questions, please contact the Wilmington Engineering Division at 978-658-4499 or the DPW Administration Office at 978-658-4481.

VISITING HARRISBURG, PA:
A CAPITOL IDEA

By ROSALYN IMPINK
News Correspondent

Just down the road from Hershey Park, Harrisburg is a great stop on any Pennsylvania trip. Founded in 1791 on the banks of the Susquehanna River, Harrisburg quickly became a major trade center and an important stop for westward-bound pioneers.

For sweeping views of the mighty Susquehanna, kick off the day with a visit to Little Amps Coffee Roasters, a nationally recognized espresso bar with a wide range of coffee offerings, and take a stroll on the Capital Area Greenbelt, a 20-mile trail for walking and cycling.

The Susquehanna originates in Cooperstown, New York, and empties into the Chesapeake Bay; at over 400 miles it is the longest river in the Eastern United States.

No trip to Harrisburg is complete without visiting the state capitol complex. The magnificent green-domed building was completed in 1906 — President Teddy Roosevelt attended the dedication and proclaimed it "the handsomest building I ever saw." The architecture and design pays tribute to Pennsylvania's history as an industrial, economic, and political power player over the centuries.

The capitol offers free guided tours seven days a week, and self-guided tours on weekdays. Enter through the capitol rotunda and immediately take in the grandeur of the three-tiered gallery under the dome. The design takes inspiration from the Paris Opera House and includes a sweeping staircase made of Italian marble. The floor is tiled with tableaus from the progression of Pennsylvania's industrial history.

The Senate chamber boasts impressive mural art and stained glass windows portraying themes including justice, history and peace. Paintings memorialize important moments in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. Green Irish marble rings the room, and brilliant iron lamps light the hall.

The House of Representatives work in a similarly stunning hall, with multiton chandeliers and rare marble from the French Pyrenees. The largest mural in the capitol, "The Apotheosis of Pennsylvania," hangs behind the speaker's podium, and brings together the great founders, leaders and legislators of Pennsylvanian history, including William Penn and Benjamin Franklin.

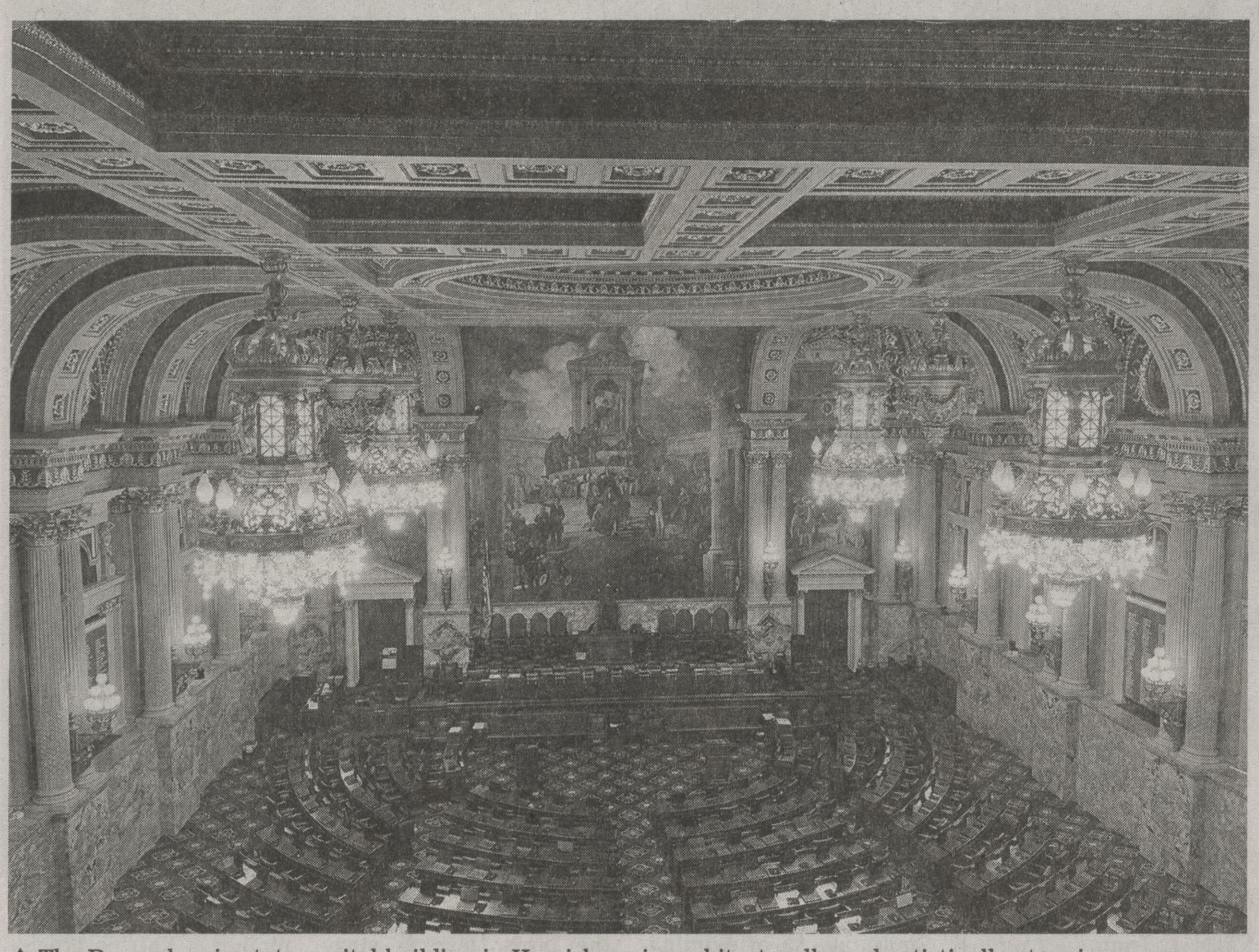
The capitol complex is also home to the state Supreme Court, which divides its time between Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia. The court chamber is capped with a beautiful stained glass green dome.

Much of the art in the chamber and across the capitol was completed by Violet Oakley, who at age 28 became the first American woman to receive a public mural commission. Oakley's "Divine Law" mural is a cryptic piece of intertwining letters — look closely and you'll spell out "love," "law" and "wisdom."

The rest of the capitol complex is sprawling with over 600 rooms, offices, and memorials. Next door is the State Museum of Pennsylvania. For a small admission fee, visitors can check out exhibits detailing Pennsylvania's history from indigenous peoples to colonial times, to the industrial age and beyond. Artifacts are well interpreted and highlight iconic people and places in the Keystone State. Don't miss the Penn Charter — in 1681 King Charles issued this document to William Penn to found the Pennsylvania colony.

Civil war historians should make their way to the National Civil War Museum, a private museum that is affiliated with the Smithsonian Institute. Galleries trace the leadup and causes to the war, geography of major battles, women's roles, and Abraham Lincoln's life and legacy. Artifacts from the Union and Confederacy are on display, and rotating exhibits dig deeper into the war.

Make sure to stop and admire the wealth of art, architecture, and design that Harrisburg has to offer. No trip to Pennsylvania is complete without a trip to this center of history.



▲ The Pennsylvania state capitol building in Harrisburg is architecturally and artistically stunning.

opportunities to engage with law enforcement in a positive setting. Some of the highlights he mentioned were the bounce houses, dunk tank, and meeting K-9s.

He also thanked the Wilmington Fire Department, Red Heat Tavern, Target, Brotherhood for the Fallen, and DJ Frank Marchsi specifically for their support and contributions.

Stavro said that the department was thrilled with this year's turnout.

"Hundreds of community members came out to enjoy the evening," he shared via email.

He reported they had great weather which made for a more comfortable experience.

"[National Night Out] allows us to educate the community about our work and gives everyone a chance to speak with us on a more personal level," Stavro continued.

He went on to say that providing a relaxed environment allows space for important conversations with law enforcement that members of the community may not otherwise feel comfortable initiating.

The police department wrote in a public statement, "National Night Out is a fantastic opportunity to strengthen community bonds, learn about public safety, and have a great time with your neighbors."

They referred to the event as an exciting combination of fun and community spirit.

The annual event is always held on the first Tuesday in August to build community and increase safety and mutual respect through partnerships between the police and the neighborhood. Wilmington typically invites members of their own police and fire departments; the Federal Bureau of Investigation; the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms; United States Postal Inspection Service; Veteran's Affairs Police; Federal Reserve Police; Massachusetts State Police; Massachusetts Environmental Police; and Massachusetts National Guard to attend.

Stavro expressed gratitude on behalf of the Wilmington Police Department for all of the law enforcement agencies that participated in Wilmington this year.

Connor, with Wisdom & War, to perform at music fest styles. Soon after, he formed his first band, called Rasputin.

While continuing with his craft, Connor enjoyed the experience of playing in multiple bands, and currently plays with several bands, like JUDGExJUDY, a powerviolence, grindcore, fast punk band and UBA, a metalcore band with hardcore leaning and heavy metal influences.

He will be the featured guitarist performing with the band Wisdom & War at the upcoming Tough Luck Fest. This band is a mix between nu metal and hardcore, with an emphasis on groove and energy.

"Hardcore I've loved since before I became a teenager," said Connor, "and to be in hardcore bands with widely different but also similar influences and sound in a DIY oriented music community is an amazing and fulfilling experience."

Although this is not Connor's first music festival he has performed in, Tough Luck Fest is the biggest music festival he has been involved in.

After headlining a packed local show of multiple bands at the Worcester Palladium, the lead vocalist of the band Nailed Shut MA, Asher, invited Connor and other performers of that night to perform at the much anticipated, upcoming Tough Luck Fest at the Brighton Music Hall.

The exposure of performing in such a large music festival is sure to help boost Connor's music career, but he is already hard at work continuing on his path in music with plans for after the festival.

Connor has several new projects in the works, and hopes to eventually get involved in film and video game composing.

Of the near and not so near future, Connor stated, "I released new music with Wisdom & War and JUDGExJUDY this year, and UBA is entering the studio this fall, and may be releasing something by the end of the year, so who knows! Keep your eyes and ears peeled for any of that kind of news!"

As for the distant future, film and video composing is a long term goal he has wanted to achieve since college graduation.

"But alas," Connor speaks of his future career with a smile, "I remain patient. It will happen one way or another, I just can't slack too much!"

To learn more about Camden Connor's music and upcoming events visit him on Instagram @Camden_Connor and @wisdomandwarofficial, on Twitter (aka X) @fluffulufugus, or follow his Facebook page Camden Connor.

You can also learn more about Connor's music with the band Wisdom & War at linktr.ee/wisdomandwarband.

Woburn to break ground on transformational park and wetlands project

By PATRICK BLAIS

Forecasting the undertaking will take nearly six years to complete, Woburn officials earlier this month advanced plans to metamorphize the old Hurld School site off Bedford Road into a recreational gem with a focus on climate change.

At the outset of this month, the City Council wholeheartedly supported a request by Mayor Michael Concannon to break ground on the multi-phased construction project by appropriating around $1.1 million for the demolition of the old 28,000 square foot school off of Bedford Road and preparing the site for various recreational amenities.

According to Concannon, who hopes to obtain a state parkland acquisitions and renovations (PARC) grant to cover roughly 60 percent of the park's first phase, both state and federal officials like U.S. Congresswoman Katherine Clark and State Rep. Richard Haggerty (D-Woburn) have been working hand-in-hand with City Council President Jeffrey Dillon and others in recent years to bring the new park to the shovel ready stage.

"I'm very excited about this project and I know the council president is working very had to make it happen," said the mayor during council committee meetings in City Hall in July. "This is a significant request [for funding] and we're seeking the authority to secure the necessary funding and grants to make this a reality."

Constructed back in 1957, the old Hurld School was abandoned by the local School Committee back in 2018, or a few months after the city opened its new $35 million Hurld-Wyman Elementary School in Woburn's Central Square area.

Years before the local school board made that declaration, former Mayor Scott Galvin, in a 2015 compromise reached with the City Council that allowed the new Hurld-Wyman to be built on part of an old Spence Farm parcel off of Wyman Street, pledged to transfer the ownership of the old Hurld School site over to the Recreation Commission.

PARK PLANS SET IN MOTION - Back in the spring of 2021, some 60 area residents (above, file photo) toured Woburn's vacant Hurld Elementary School site (Hurld School site) with city and state leaders to discuss the future of the 11.3 acre site in West Woburn. That kick off meeting and visioning session gave birth to a multi-million dollar proposal (New Hurld Park plan) to transform the sprawling property into a multi-faceted, "climate-resilient" park that includes an athletic field, splash park, basketball courts and other active recreation amenities, a picnicking area and a series of interconnected hiking trails, and the restoration of wetlands. The neighborhood around the Hurld School property has become densely populated over the past 75 years (Hurld Park over time), resulting in area flooding that should become far less frequent by creating new stormwater storage areas. 'It Ends With Us' with Blake Lively tackles big issues

BEGINNING OF THE END - Justin Baldoni, right, and Blake Lively in a scene from "It Ends With Us" released by Sony Pictures.
(Nicole Rivelli/Sony Pictures via AP)

By MARK KENNEDY
AP Entertainment Writer

Lily Bloom and Ryle Kincaid don't really meet-cute. On a rooftop in Boston, he announces himself by angrily kicking a patio chair. She's up there trying to come to terms with her abusive father's death. They talk about maraschino cherries, gun violence and flirt. There's something off about this pair. But there's also an obvious attraction.

So begins the uneven movie adaptation of Colleen Hoover's best-selling 2016 novel "It Ends With Us" starring Blake Lively, which tries to balance the realities of domestic violence inside a rom-com and a female-empowerment movie. All suffer in the process.

It veers too close to melodrama, with suicide, homelessness, generational trauma, child murder, unintended pregnancy and never-forgotten love all touched on and only half digested. Set in Boston, it never even pulls from that city's flavor.

The film centers on Lively's Lily, a flower shop owner who finds herself in the middle of a complicated love triangle between hunky neurosurgeon Ryle — Justin Baldoni, who also directs — and her hunky high school sweetheart, Atlas, played with hangdog cuteness by Brandon Sklenar.

There are red flags about Ryle but they aren't obvious until they're strung together, which takes, literally, years. Credit to the filmmakers for not making the potential abuser so easy to wave a red flag about.

The most powerful thing about "It Ends With Us" is the after-effects of domestic violence and how they unmoor those who witness or survive it. This could have been tightened or highlighted more. (The end credits direct viewers to the anti-domestic violence group No More.)

Baldoni perfectly balances menace and seduction, operating in the zone between assertive and psychotic. And his direction is good, with an ability to summarize scenes quickly and move the plot elegantly, although he does have a fondness for too many music-led montages.

Lively is fine here, veering dangerously close to Manic Pixie Dream Girl with her cute flower sketches and love of shabby chic, but perks up at the end. She wears a lot of rings and a lot of florals but can also stun a room in a cut-out dress.

The script by Christy Hall has some terrible clunkers — "This man runs through women like candy," someone says at one point — but nicely maneuvers around the book's weird spots, like making Lily's dad's funeral a flashback instead of an odd recreation on the rooftop.

But "It Ends With Us" doesn't end quickly enough — more than two hours drag — with tangents and poor editing, like sudden scene cuts that leave viewers looking for clues to where they are.

And we have so many questions, like how Lively's character got onto the roof of that luxury highrise in the first place. And what's with Lily's best friend — Jenny Slate, clearly stealing the movie — who wears Valentino dresses and carries a purse that costs the same as a small car? She clearly doesn't need a retail job, but works at the flower shop anyway?

And what's with the weird relationship with Carhartt — check out the copycat logo appearing and disappearing from jackets and jumpsuits — apparently trying to show the wearers as down-to-earth working class folks, when they are not.

The movie's adoration of wealth and luxury — from a Mercedes to million-dollar apartments and fancy dinner reservations — I guess are attempts to show that domestic violence isn't confined to sports bars and factories.

What's very funny is that Lily clearly has a type: Both her paramours are dark-haired buff dudes who favor tight black T-shirts, have stubble beards and adore her. When they fight — and they do — it's actually hard to tell them apart.

The bursting soundtrack — with Thom Yorke's "Dawn Chorus," Lewis Capaldi's "Love the Hell Out of You" and Brittany Howard's "I Don't" represented — has the undeniable presence of Lively bestie Taylor Swift, who has lent her "My Tears Ricochet."

When Lily and Ryle finally hook up for the first time, she warns him: "Don't let me regret this." She will, of course. And a few others who are part of this film probably will, too.

"It Ends With Us," a Sony Pictures release that hits movie theaters Friday, is rated PG-13 for "domestic violence, sexual content and some strong language." Running time: 130 minutes. One and a half stars out of four.

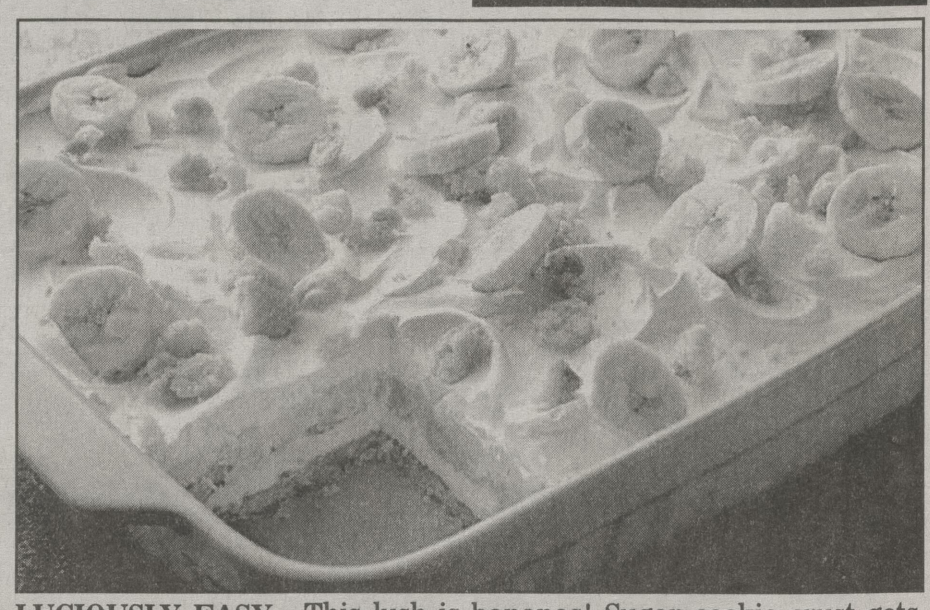
Banana Cream Pie Lush



LUCIOUSLY EASY - This lush is bananas! Sugar cookie crust gets topped with a sweet vanilla creamy layer, sliced bananas, pudding and whipped topping for an irresistible take on banana cream pie.

STEPS

1. Heat oven to 375°F. Make and bake drop cookies as directed on pouch. Cool completely, about 30 minutes. Set aside 4 cookies for garnish.

2. In food processor, process half of the remaining cookies to coarse crumbs. Remove to medium bowl. Continue to process second half of remaining cookies to coarse crumbs; add to bowl. Stir in melted butter and 1/2 teaspoon of the vanilla until well blended. In ungreased 13x9-inch (3-quart) glass baking dish, press cookie crumb mixture firmly in bottom. Set aside.

3. In large bowl, beat cream cheese, powdered sugar and remaining 1 teaspoon vanilla with electric mixer on medium speed until smooth, scraping down side of bowl frequently. Beat in 2 cups of the whipped topping. Spread over cookie crust. Place 2 1/2 cups banana slices in single layer over cream cheese mixture.

4. In another medium bowl, beat dry pudding mixes and milk with whisk about 2 minutes or until thick. Drop by spoonfuls over banana layer; spread evenly over top. Drop remaining whipped topping by spoonfuls over pudding layer; spread evenly. Cover and refrigerate 4 hours.

5. When ready to serve, crush remaining 4 cookies. Sprinkle pie with crushed cookies, and top with 1 cup banana slices. Cut into 6 rows by 4 rows. Cover and refrigerate any remaining pieces.

In 2021, after city leaders had done little to advance a formal plan for that new park, Dillon, whose Ward 3 district includes the Bedford Road property, jumpstarted the brainstorming process by arranging a site visit to the 11.3 acre parcel. At that time, he and Galvin unveiled a plan, crafted in consultation with the non-profit Mystic River Watershed Association, to raze the one-story schoolhouse and create a park at the front of the site and a conservation space with walking trails and an elevated boardwalk over a wetlands area on the rear of the parcel by Sheridan Street.

"Please tell us what you want to see," Dillon told gathered area residents at the time.

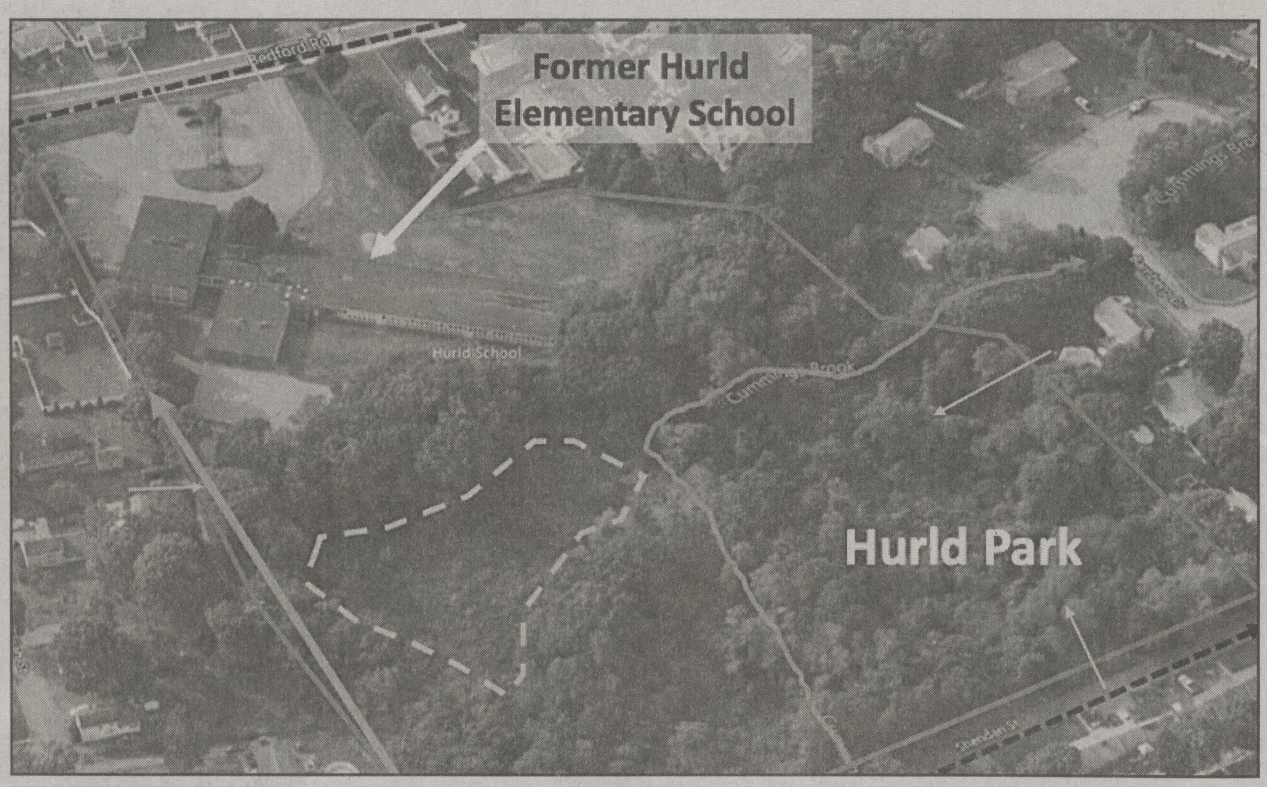
Just about a year later, Clark, who was then serving as assistant speaker of the US House of Representatives, announced she and other federal legislators had earmarked $262,500 in federal funding for designing a "climate-resilient" park aimed at alleviating forecasted worsening heat and storm conditions in the New England region due to climate change. Not long after that announcement, Haggerty and colleagues informed city officials they had secured another $300,000 to help defray design and construction costs.

Last month, City Engineer Jay Corey explained the new park will be divided in half and consist of an active recreational site in the front and more passive conservation uses by the wetlands areas to the rear of the property.

"Essentially, we have a three-phase project. We'll have the demolition of the existing building and the stabilization of [the soils] where the building once stood [under Phase 1]," the since retired city engineer told City Council members. "We then intend to build a heat-resilient, nature-based park [there]."

Thanks to the influx of state and federal funding, local officials have already finalized the design for the front park, which will include an open field for unorganized play and sporting activities, basketball courts, a children's playground and splash park, and a shade shelter with seating for picnickers. A series of hiking trails and benches will also be scattered around the field area.

City officials plan to begin demolishing the school in September and hope to secure grant funding from the state's Municipal Vulnerability Preparedness (MVP) program to offset costs associated with Phase 2. The MVP program was established back in 2017 to provide cities and towns with financial support to help identify climate change hazards and develop plans to tackle those anticipated challenges.



WOBURN'S HURLD SCHOOL SITE - Woburn officials earlier this month advanced plans to rejuvinate the old Hurld School site off Bedford Road into a recreational gem.

"We should have that building down by about Thanksgiving and then we'll stabilize the site. By next spring, we're going for another MVP program grant, which would allows us to build the upper park," Corey stated.

Under Phase 3 of the project, construction will involve the restoration of area wetlands and the re-routing of Cummings Brook, a stream that bisects the 11.3-acre property and feeds into a series of vegetated wetlands that border a residential neighborhood on Sheridan Street.

The stream was previously re-directed through the site through manmade ditches that include sharp bends, which local officials say exacerbates flooding problems. The third-phase of the park plan would try to correct those issues by cleaning out debris from the brook and directing the waters along a more natural course. Excess storage for stormwater will also be created by constructing a new wetlands area, while a series of hiking trails - including elevated boardwalks over the stream - will be constructed for passive recreation.

"Phase 3, the environmental restoration, that's like three years out from now]," the city engineer said. "We already have $3 million committed by FEMA for that work, but we still need some more funding."

"There's a ditch that takes a right-hand turn and is very unnatural. What we're doing is recreating a natural stream and creating a flood plain so we can reduce the impacts of flooding in the area," he added. "The state just loves our project, because most people aren't restoring their wetlands."

Wilmington has a solid summer

Girls basketball finishes season with win over Burlington

By MARK NADEAU
Sports Correspondent
sports@yourtowncrier.com

WOBURN — The Wilmington High girls basketball team held its own at the Summer Basketball final tourney, last week at Torrice Gym, despite only coming with four players.

The 12 teams were divided into three pods, and the Wildcats played in the middle one, suggesting they were in the middle of the pack this summer.

Wilmington normally had several more players at its games, but a bunch of them play soccer and Captain's practices are underway for the fall varsity.

The Wildcats opened up with a tough opponent in Wakefield, in the first of two 24-minute games, played mostly on running time.

Wilmington only had four players, but they were good ones, as they stayed with Wakefield, a team with a strong roster and good depth, until the latter minutes in a 24-17 loss.

It took both squads awhile to get going on offense, with the Warriors getting on board first, with a free throw and a bucket for a 3-0 lead.

Wilmington's Summer Sands was the first to find her range, and a pair of treys had the Wildcats in the lead, 6-3.

The game began to open more as the players got their proper feel for the game at hand. This helped Wakefield go on a 7-0 run to take a 10-6 lead.

Eva Boudreau ended the Warrior run with her first basket, and it was the hard work of Boudreau and Leah Murphy which helped the Wilmington trade punches with Wakefield underneath the basket.

Boudreau hit one of two free throws, and a second basket, which helped the Wildcats stay within two, 13-11. It was 15-11 when Murphy knocked down a 3-pointer to get Wilmington to within a point, 15-14.

While Wakefield was shuttling in new players every few minutes, Wilmington had no reserves, and the Warriors took advantage of that down the stretch. An 8-0 run helped Wakefield pull away in the late stages.

Bella Goldstein got the last field goal for the Wildcats in the Wakefield 24-17 victory.

While this game was going on, Belmont was clamping down defensively on Burlington in the other game that ran concurrently with Wakefield-Wilmington.

The Marauders won 19-3, which meant they next faced Wakefield, while the Red Devils challenged Wilmington in the second game.

At the end of the first game, Sands turned her ankle a bit, and needed some attention.

Sands was able to take part in the second game, but was not at full speed. Burlington's coaches graciously allowed Wildcat coach Jenna Tavanese to don a shirt and be the fifth player for Wilmington.

Tavanese did her best to stay out of the spotlight, always dishing the ball in transition and deliberately missing her free throw attempt when Burlington needed to foul down the stretch.

For about the first 10 minutes of the action, the Red Devils held a slight edge. Sophia Marshall scored the first basket of the game, and two successful drives to the basket by Marin Jones allowed Burlington to take leads of 4-2 and 6-4.

Brooke Baglio then scored to give the Red Devils their biggest lead of the night, 8-4.

It was Eva Boudreau and Leah Murphy that accounted for Wilmington's first four points, and it was this tandem that helped the Wildcats get rolling and take over the game.

Boudreau tied the game at 8-8 with two free throws and an inside bucket.

Murphy made one of two free throws to put Wilmington in front, and then followed up with two more free throws for an 11-8 lead.

While Burlington went through a scoring drought, the Wildcats went on a 7-0 run to nearly double up the Red Devils, 15-8. Bella Goldstein asserted herself into the Wilmington offense and scored the next two baskets.

Savanna Scali snapped the Burlington cold spell with the game's first 3-pointer, immediately getting the Red Devils back in the game, 15-11. Boudreau answered with a three for the Wildcats, pushing the lead back up to seven, 18-11.

Two more points from Murphy and a free throw from Boudreau gave Wilmington its biggest lead, 21-11, with about four minutes left in the contest.

The Wildcats struggled at the free throw line down the stretch, and Burlington got four points from Charlotte Scola, plus another triple from Scali to get the lead down to four at the end of the game, 22-18.

Boudreau led all scorers with 10 points, while Murphy was close behind with eight points.

The Wildcats will be looking to build on their 10-10 record last year, as well as their 17 power ranking in Division 3 when training camp begins the first week of December.

Youth softball:

Another big weekend for Redmen Red squad

The 12U Redmen Red team came into last weekend's tournament in Woburn riding high coming in the top two in three of their last four tournaments.

"We knew the rain was going to play a factor for this tournament but we also knew that we had to play our game and we can't control the weather," Redmen Red coach Adam Perkins stated.

With that being said, the Redmen Red team went ahead and played Friday night against the RES Angels Navy team and manufactured one run in the first in when Callie La Marche walked and Addison Perkins bunted her over to third base where LaMarche then scored on a passed ball.

Leah Khourie shut out the Navy team in the first inning striking out two batters. Then the skies opened up and canceled the game.

"We were disappointed because we knew that was a team we could beat and now we had to go into a very tough Saturday schedule where we needed to go 2-0," Coach Perkins said.

Saturday brought two tough games for the Redmen team starting with the NE Elite, who traveled down from Maine.

The Redmen ended up winning by an 8-2 score.

The Redmen struck first, with two outs in the first inning, Mia Davis singled which scored Addison Perkins, who reached base on an error.

Brooke Dykeman stepped to the plate next and pounded a line drive to left centerfield and with her speed, she was able to round the bases scoring two runs on an inside-the-park home run.

The Elite team put up two runs of their own on some walks and errors.

The Redmen came right back in the second inning when Bella Cueva singled, followed by a Leah Khourie single and then an Ali Silbovitz single in which scored Cueva.

After Kayle Skinner got hit by a pitch to load the bases, the Elite team's defense came up big getting three straight outs holding the Red team to just the one run.

In the fourth inning, the Redmen added another run when Callie LaMarche singled, stole second and third base and then scored on a passed ball. The fifth inning was big for the Redmen team in which they put up three runs. It all started with Mia Davis singling followed by a Brooke Dykeman single.

Loghan Cahill grounded out to second base, scoring Davis on the play. Kaelyn Obie then singled scoring Dykeman and Leah Khourie also singled scoring Obie.

The Redmen offense was led by Davis and Dykeman who both went 3 for 3 while Khourie and Silbovitz both went 2 for 3. Kaelyn Obie was on the mound and after surrendering a few first inning walks, she calmed down and ended up throwing for six innings allowing no hits and giving up zero earned runs while striking out seven Elite batters.

The Redmen's next game was against a good RES Angels Halo team and Tewksbury won a close game, 5-4.

"This was going to be a battle, we knew this was the team everyone wanted to beat," Perkins said. The Redmen struck first in the second inning when Brooke Dykeman doubled and after Loghan Cahill moved Dykeman to third on a sacrifice bunt, Kaelyn Obie singled to score Dykeman.

The Halo team put up four runs in the fourth inning when they strung along a few hits and some sloppy defense by the Redmen team didn't help, committing a couple of costly errors.

The Redmen put up two runs of their own in the bottom of the fourth. Mia Davis walked and then Dykeman singled. Cahill then grounded into a fielder's choice scoring both Davis and Dykeman bringing the score to 4-3, Halos.

The Redmen tied the game in the fifth when Bella Cueva reached base on an infield single.

After moving over on a Silbovitz ground out and then a Kayle Skinner walk, Cueva scored on a passed ball. That brought this tight game into the sixth inning all tied at 4 runs apiece.

After two groundball outs and a fly ball caught by Kayle Skinner, the Redmen went into the bottom of the inning with a chance to win the game.

"We knew at that point, we had at least a tie on our hands but these girls wanted the W and you could see it on their exhausted faces," Perkins said after the game.

After a strikeout, Davis and Dykeman both walked. Cahill then grounded out moving the runners over to second and third. Kaelyn Obie stepped to the plate with two outs and runners in scoring position. On a 1-2 count, Obie ripped a single up the middle scoring Davis and giving the Redmen the 5-4 win.

"It was one of the better games I have ever been involved in. We knew how good this Halo team was but our girls never gave up and just kept grinding. Seeing Obie come up with the game winning hit and the smile that followed is what makes this sport so great and this team so special and a privilege to coach," said Coach Perkins.

Dykeman and Obie led the way on offense with two hits apiece and Leah Khourie was absolutely phenomenal on the mound, keeping the Redmen in the game, throwing six innings, giving up five hits, allowing zero earned runs while striking out seven Halo hitters.

The Redmen Red went 2-0 in pool play and went into elimination Sunday as the No. 3 seed.

The Redmen's first opponent was in the quarterfinal game against the No. 6 seeded Northern Mass Invaders and Tewksbury won the game easily, 13-1.

The Redmen scored three runs in the first inning when leadoff hitter, Callie LaMarche tripled followed by an Addison Perkins walk.

LaMarche scored on a passed ball and then Brooke Dykeman singled Addison Perkins who stole second base. After Dykeman advanced on a wild pitch and passed ball, she scored after tagging up on a Mia Davis fly ball.

The Redmen piled it on scoring six runs in the bottom of the second inning.

Leah Khourie walked and then Bella Cueva singled followed by an Ali Silbovitz single that scored Khourie and Cueva. Perkins then tripled to bring home Silbovitz in which Perkins then scored on an Addy Anderson groundball. Dykeman then doubled followed by a Davis single that scored Anderson and Dykeman bringing the Redmen lead to 9-0.

The Redmen finished off the Invaders by means of the mercy rule in the fourth inning.

It all started with a Davis single followed by a Loghan Cahill walk. Kaelyn Obie then reached base on an error in which two runs scored. Cahill then scored on a wild pitch and Obie then also scored on a wild pitch to give the Redmen a 12-run lead and victory by the score of 13-1.

The Redmen Red's offense was led by Davis, Dykeman, and Silbovitz who each had two hits.

Obie was great on the mound throwing for four innings giving up only one run on one hit.

That win cemented the Red's team's path to the semifinals where they were going to play the No. 2 seeded Redmen Blue team, a team they already beat twice this season but to beat any team three times is a daunting task.

Sadly, just as the Redmen battle began, the weather took a turn for the worse canceling the game and shutting down the tournament.

The tournament awarded the runner up and championship awards to top two seeds left which meant the Redmen Red team earned the runner ups and the Blue team the champions.

"Even though it wasn't the outcome that either team wanted, it was still a good day for our program," said Coach Perkins. "As always, I was very proud of how our girls played, especially against the Halo team. The played with heart and determination and never gave up. That is something every coach can be proud of."

Trotta is movin' on up

One particular member of Tewksbury High's 2024 varsity baseball squad is still reaping the benefits of its high-flying season on the diamond last spring.

After pitching coach Matt Trotta was at the nucleus of the Redmen's first winning season since 2008 and first state tournament triumph since 2012, he's had an opportunity present itself that he couldn't turn down.

Earlier this month, the Concord-Carlisle High School Athletic Department tabbed Trotta as the school's next varsity baseball head coach.

Trotta — who joined Tewksbury first-year skipper Matt Feld's coaching staff last spring after a prolonged coaching career in club baseball — is here to stay on the high school scene.

"We balanced each other out, and I learned a ton from him," Trotta said of Feld. "It showed me after the year we had together that I was ready to take that next step."

Trotta practically lives and breathes baseball.

The Westford native pitched four years of college ball at Fisher College before founding his baseball clinic, TroPro Baseball, in 2019. He then joined Nor' Easters Baseball as the program's pitching coordinator while also coaching teams across the various age groups within the organization. He even cohosts his own Red Sox podcast, SoxHub.

His passion for baseball started at a young age when his dad, a longtime faculty member at Fisher, would take him to work every day. He saw the behind-the-scenes processes of baseball manager Scott Dulin, learning what it takes to start a program from scratch. He'd later play under Dulin on that very team.

"It kind of motivated me at a really young age that it was what I wanted to do eventually once I felt like I had enough experience under my belt," said Trotta. "Lead a high school program, a college program, whatever it may be."

Trotta's role at his baseball clinic and then at Nor'Easters was primarily developmental, honing in on preparing athletes for the next level during the offseason. He'd coach everything from mechanics to pitch grips.

The exact opposite of what being a high school skipper entails.

With a lack of off-season player development, Trotta didn't have the time or resources to attempt any major changes to the pitching staff. Instead, it was all about identifying what they do best and maximizing it.

"It wasn't so much the philosophy of thinking about mechanics and completely rewiring an individual," he said of his experience at Tewksbury. "It was more buying into their own personal philosophy and how they attack athletics. Showing them how to use their strengths was my biggest thing."

He noticed how that coaching philosophy translated into all areas of the team.

"During practice time, I was hanging out with the hitters when they were waiting for their batting practice or talking with the infielders about infield work and the finer details of that. Just buying into that approach of thinking about the mindset and thinking about the mentality and simplifying it for these guys. You branch that out outside of pitching, and it's the same game," he said.

So when Concord-Carlisle came knocking on the door, Trotta's resume and most recent experience in Tewksbury spoke for itself. There was no better candidate for the position.

But Trotta won't exactly be picking up where he left off with the Redmen. He'll inherit a 3-17 Patriots squad that has struggled to find their footing in Div. 1 under high turnover rates at head coach.

"The main thing is to get on the same page with the kids," said Trotta. "They've had a lot of turnover the last couple of years at the coaching position and they haven't had a lot of program success. So it's getting meetings done individually with the players, the athletic director, and the other coaches in the high school."

Regardless of how that win-loss record looks like after next season, Trotta knows the process won't happen overnight.

"It's a long-term sort of thing," he said. "It's putting the right pieces in place for future success down the line in the next two to five years."

But that doesn't mean he won't give it everything he has from Day 1.

"A big thing is showing them that I'm all in on it," Trotta said. "I can't play with them, but it's almost like they have the feeling that I'm out there with them pitch by pitch with them and living and dying with them."
